It is usually obtained from the blossoms of bitter oranges and an appreciated “flavoring”, especially in Morocco. The blossoms are collected in spring when the buds are still closed and stored for 2 days before the distillation process begins. Once the bottles are filled, they are carefully capped and stored for four to five months. It takes 3 kg of blossoms to obtain 5 liters of orange blossom water. Neroli oil: a very rare distillate of orange blossoms and a precious natural ingredient for perfumes. Fragrance profile: gentle and bloomy, fresh, sweet, radiant, mellow, middle note. Due to its relaxing and uncramping yet stimulating effect, it is also very appreciated in aroma therapy.
